INTRODUCTION.

THE DESIGN OF THIS WORK.—No publication of the "Statutes" of Illinois for popular use, can do more than present the general laws of the state which are in force at the time. This has been done in the edition of statutes which we publish, and it is all that can be accomplished within the limits of a single volume. From such a book, a very large number of acts must of necessity be excluded, either as being not in force, or not of general interest. But a large number of those very acts thus excluded, are of the highest importance to those who are interested in them, and it often becomes extremely desirable to know exactly where to find them. These pages, then, are intended as a complete guide to all the legislation of the State of Illinois, enacted since 1188, whether public or private, repealed or obsolete, but not including any acts printed in Gross' Statutes of 1869. It is in two parts, the one dealing with the Public acts, the other with the Private acts.

Part I is a classified synopsis of all the Public Statutes which have been enacted in the state of Illinois, since its admission into the Union, in 1818. This synopsis is made to perform the office of an index, by being arranged in chapters, numbered and entitled to correspond with our "Statutes," and will show 1. A concise statement of the general subject, or subjects, embraced in each act. 2. The date of the approval of the act, and 3. The book or books and the page where it may be found printed at large. This part of the work is brought down to the close of the session of 1869.

Part II is a classified synopsis of all the Private and Local Statutes which have been enacted and printed in the state of Illinois, since its admission into the Union, in 1818. The classification is by counties, with sub-titles for cities and towns. All acts not capable of being assigned to any particular locality, are grouped under general and it is hoped, convenient titles, and the whole is then alphabetically arranged. A glance at the table of contents will make this plain. The only private acts not comprised in this index, are the private acts of 1869, not yet in print.

To avoid any possible mistake, a further word of explanation should perhaps be added. In some instances, private and local acts have been placed in Part I. This is where there is a chapter in that Part entitled with precisely the subject of the act. For instance. Roads, Courts, Plank roads and Railroads. Some charters of incorporated companies, which contain no allusion to their locality are indexed under Corporations. On the other hand, those classes of public acts, which could not properly be placed under any chapter of the "Statutes," will be found arranged in the second Part.

BOOKS IN WHICH THE STATUTES OF ILLINOIS HAVE BEEN PUBLISHED.—In order to assist in the examination of past Legislation, we have prepared a list of all the books in which the statutes of the state of Illinois have been published. It will be seen that the first book named, is the session laws of 1819, although there was a session of the Legislature commencing 5 Oct. 1818. No laws were enacted at that session, as an examination of its journals will show, and the reason assigned is that the state had not then been admitted into the Union. The formal resolution for the admission of Illinois as a state was not finally passed by congress until 3 Dec. 1818. Hence the first laws enacted by the state of Illinois, were the acts of 1819.

Revisions and Compilations.—Indiana Territory was organized under an act of Congress approved 7 May 1800, which fixed the seat of government for the Ohio Territory at Chilicothe on the Scioto river, and that of the Indiana Territory at Saint Vincennes, on the Wabash river. What was then called Indiana included what is now Illinois, Indiana and most of Michigan. In the year 1807 Stout & Smoot, "printers to the Territory" of Indiana, issued a volume of 540 pages. This was:

1. The Revision of John Rice Jones and John Johnson, "comprising those formerly in force, * * and the original acts passed at the first session of the second general assembly of said territory, begun and held at the borough of Vincennes," 16 Aug. 1807. All the acts are signed by Jesse B. Thomas, as speaker of the house of representatives, B. Chambers president of the council, and approved by William Henry Harrison as governor. Terms of the common pleas court were to be held in the counties of Dearborn, (Chicago was formerly Fort Dearborn) Clark, Knox, (Vincennes was in Knox) Randolph and St. Clair. It would appear from this that the two oldest counties in Illinois were Randolph and St. Clair. The Supreme court was to be held at Vincennes. Very many sections in this old book will be instantly recognized as a part of the law as it is in force to-day, and sometimes whole pages appear almost word for word as we have them now. Attachments were not permitted except against non-resident debtors. Divorce from bed and board for extreme cruelty was allowed. The provisions relating to the licensing of attorneys were almost exactly as at present. So also, the chapter on Trespass. There are some curious provisions. For instance: "If any person of the age of sixteen years and upwards, shall profanely curse, damn or swear, by the name of God, Christ Jesus or the Holy Ghost, every person so offending being thereof convicted shall forfeit and pay for every such profane curse, damn or oath, a sum not exceeding two dollars, nor less than fifty cents, at the discretion of the justice who may take cognizance thereof; and in case he shall refuse or neglect to pay the said forfeiture, or goods and chattels cannot be found whereof to levy the same by distress, he shall be committed to the charge of one of the supervisors of the highways of the township where the offense was committed, to be kept at hard labor for the space of two days for every such offense of which such person shall be convicted." And again: "If any person or persons shall kill any one or more neat cattle, or hogs in the woods, he shall within three days show the head and ears of such hog or hogs, and the hide with the ears on, of such neat beast or cattle to the next magistrate, or two substantial freeholders, under the penalty of ten dollars." And any person selling any hog, shoat or pig without ears, was to be deemed a hog stealer. This revision was made in pursuance of a resolution passed at a former session. The volume closes with an act which declares all former acts repealed, except as therein revised and re-enacted.

On the 3d day of February 1809, congress passed an act dividing the Indiana Territory into two separate governments. For the first time the Illinois territory had an independent existence. The act was to take effect 1 Mar. 1809. The seat of government was established at Kaskaskia, on the Mississippi.

2. The second Revision was by Nathaniel Pope. He had been the first governor of the new territory of Illinois. His commission was signed by James Madison, and was dated 7 Mar. 1809. He took the oath of office 5 April 1809. His first official act was to divide the territory into the two counties of St. Clair and Randolph. Afterwards, when Ninian Edwards was appointed the governor of the territory, Gov. Pope became secretary. On the 14th of March 1812, Gov. Edwards ordered an election for the purpose of ascertaining the wish of the people about organizing under the act of congress as one of the territories of the second class. September 14 he issued his proclamation declaiming that a majority of those who had expressed an opinion were in favor of the proposed change, and calling for an election of members of the legislature to be held on the 8th, 9th and 10th days of October. The legislature had its first session, beginning 25 Nov. 1812.

The laws which were enacted at that and the succeeding sessions of the legislature, were not gathered together until 1815. On the 4th of July of that year, Matthew Duncan, printer to the Territory, issued from his office in Kaskaskia, the revision of Nathaniel Pope. It was in two volumes. The first had 304 pages and an index; the second was paged from 308 to 710, and also contained a copious and careful index. The counties had now increased to six, namely: Madison and St. Clair in the first circuit, Randolph and Johnson in the second, and Gallatin and Edwards in the third.

The similarity of this book to the present statutes is much more striking than the resemblance in Jones' Revision. Whole chapters appear in the form that they still wear. Indeed the entire plan and arrangement of the statutes of Illinois—taken as a whole—remain at this moment in the shape that Judge Pope impressed upon them. To him really belongs whatever of merit that plan may possess. His book is now rare, only a few copies being accessible. It contains of course many curious provisions. Thus, attorneys' fees are limited: "In all civil actions where the titles of land do not come in question $2.50. Where titles of land do come in question $5. For every verbal advice where suit is not depending $1.25. Written advice where suit is not depending $2.50." A constable was allowed fifty cents "for whipping each person for a misdemeanor by order of any court or justices of the peace." Attachments against absconding debtors, are authorized. The punishment for stealing a horse, or receiving a stolen horse, by an act of 26 Oct. 1808, is death. There is a very stringent act to prevent dueling, which was passed 7 April 1810, and is said to have been adopted from the Virginia code. A reward of $50. to each citizen and $25. to each ranger who shall kill a hostile Indian, is offered by act of 24 Dec. 1814. For pursuing such an Indian to his own country and there killing him, $100. Larceny and many other crimes are punishable by whipping, in the discretion of the court. The first act in Pope's revision is one declaring what laws were then in force in the territory. As such, it specifies all the general laws of Indiana which were in force on the 1st of March 1809, and the laws passed by the governor and judges of the Illinois territory, and unrepealed by them.

3. The session laws of 1819, though perhaps not usually so considered, are really the next revision of the laws of Illinois. It comprises the statutes which were enacted by the first legislature which assembled after the state was admitted into the Union. At the first glance it has no appearance of being anything more than a confused collection of acts, some public and some private, with no attempt at a division into chapters. But a more careful examination of the acts themselves, and the subjects to which they relate, will show that the subjects of the several public acts are so arranged as to succeed each other in alphabetical order, following the arrangement of Pope's revision. Indeed it would appear that all the former acts on each subject had been consolidated and re-enacted as one act, with but little amendment. Near the close of the volume is an act repealing all the former laws of the territory, with some few specified exceptions, chiefly of private acts. It contains 357 pages, and concludes with a copious and careful index. It was printed at Kaskaskia. From that time until 1827, the legislature contented itself with merely amending the acts of 1819, isssuing at the close of each session a thin volume embodying their labors.

4. But at the session of 1827, another revision was prepared. Hon. Samuel D. Lockwood, who was at that time a judge of the supreme court, says that at the session of 1827 the legislature, by an act for the purpose, authorized and requested the supreme judges to prepare a revision. For various reasons, however, the duty of preparing a full code of statutes was but partially completed. Judges Lockwood and Smith presented the result of their labors, which was adopted, and the laws then presented by them, have been a part of every revision since. They are said to have been the the authors of the laws under the titles Abatement, Account, Amendments and Jeofails, Apprentices, Attachments, Attorneys, Bail, Bills of Exchange, Chancery, Conveyances, Courts, Depositions, Detinue, Dower, Evidence, Forcible Entry and Detainer, Fugitives from Justice, Habeas Corpus, Jails and Jailers, Limitations, Mandamus, Minors and Orphans (now Guardian and Ward), Ne Exeat and Injunctions, Oaths and Affirmations, Practice, Promissory Notes, Replevin, Right of Property and Sheriffs and Coroners. The Criminal Code was prepared by Judge Lockwood. The act concerning Frauds and Perjuries, by Judge McRoberts. Insolvent Debtors, by Judge Sawyer. Wills and Testaments, by Judge Young. Judgments and Executions, by Henry Starr. The legislature determined to undertake the remainder of the work, and the result was the revision of 1827. It is a volume of 384 pages. Unlike the statutes of 1819, it contains no general act repealing former laws; but at the end or each act is a section, which in terms repeals the former acts on that particular subject. The various acts are separated by titles, most of which are now the titles of chapters. It was printed at Vandalia.

At the next session, in 1829, it was found that the revision of 1827 had omitted a considerable number of very important acts; these were therefore revised and re-enacted, in the same manner as those in the former volume, so that this book is really a supplement to the revision of 1827, and it takes an examination of both volumes to show the condition of the law on a given subject. For this reason probably, the acts of 1829 were entitled "Revised Laws," and have usually been cited as the Revised Laws of 1829. This volume was printed at Cincinnati, for publishers in Shawneetown.

5. The next revision is that of 1833. It contains nothing to show by whom it was prepared. The plan and arrangement is the same as before. There is no division into chapters. Three thousand five hundred copies were printed by the state for distribution. The printing was done at Vandalia. Former acts are in terms repealed, and a list of them is given. It does not contain the militia law, which was printed separately.

6. In 1839, Stephen F. Gale, of Chicago, published a compilation of the statutes, prepared by himself. It was a careful work and for a long time was the chief authority for statute law in Illinois. Many references to it appear in the earlier reports. The plan of arrangement was very simple, being the same which was afterwards pursued by Judge Purple, and in Gross' statutes. That plan is merely this: To give all the acts on each subject together, under a single general title, and to follow the order of time in placing the various amendments. This book, being a compilation, and brought out by private enterprise, without the authority of the legislature, did not attempt to modify any statute—it simply presented them in a convenient form.

7. We come now to the last revision—that of 1845. It was prepared by General Mason Brayman, an eminent lawyer. He has so well described the character of the task he performed that we re-produce his language: "The only object possible of attainment was sought—that of collating and arranging the laws of the state, in accordance with their true spirit and intention, making them plain and intelligible, and relieving them from that smothering load of useless verbiage, contradictions and doubts, which had been accumulating through so many years of changing legislation. The object became, not so much to make new laws, or to depart materially from the spirit and meaning of those already existing, as to plain away excrescences, reconcile contradictions, and condense and arrange in convenient order all that remained in force at the time. Everything that had been repealed or superseded was omitted—conflicting provisions were reconciled, and sections which were obscure, involved or doubtful in their meaning, were re-written, so as to express the evident intention of the legislature, and conform to constructions fixed by the supreme court." The general plan and outline of the statutes remained as before, the book of Mr. Gale being closely followed. This is the last revision that has been made of the laws of Illinois. The work was so well and faithfully done that, although a new constitution was adopted in 1848, the book of statutes in common use remained the same. The changes in the constitution made some changes in the laws necessary, but the revision of 1845 and the session laws were everywhere consulted, and no new publication of statutes was attempted for nearly twelve years. The state published and distributed among the public officers who were required to know and to carry out the law, an edition of ten thousand copies.

8. In 1856, Norman H. Purple, of Peoria, a distinguished lawyer, and formerly a judge of the Supreme court, published a compilation of the statutes of Illinois, in two octavo volumes. The plan was simple. Following the revision of 1845, the new acts were one by one placed next after the chapters to which they were most nearly related. It was annotated with references to many decisions of the supreme court, and has always been a popular book with the lawyers. The state purchased, for distribution, one thousand copies.

9. Two years later a compilation of the statutes, also in two volumes, was published by D. B. Cooke and company of Chicago. The names of Samuel H. Treat, Walter B. Scates and Robert S. Blackwell appear on the title page as the compilers. It is usually cited as Scates' Compilation, and is commonly understood to have been mainly prepared by Judge Scates. The state purchased two thousand copies.

10. Ten years afterwards—in December, 1868—the first edition of Gross' statutes, one thousand in all, was published. The state purchased five hundred copies, and an act was passed declaring it to be evidence in the courts. A second edition has been prepared, and is now in use, including the acts of 1869.

Time when Statutes Take Effect.—Under the constitution of 1848, no public act is in force until the lapse of sixty days from the adjournment of the general assembly, unless otherwise expressly so stated in the act itself. Art. 3 §23. It has long been the practice, in the official publication of the laws of each session, to mark against each act the date when it was supposed to take effect. But this date has almost uniformly been computed as sixty days from the day when the act was approved, and not from the close of the session. Many mistakes on this point have therefore crept into the various publications of our statutes. For convenience of reference, a table of the sessions of the general assembly is subjoined, by which the time when any act went into operation can be determined at a glance. It is prepared from a careful examination of the journals of the assembly. Consult on this subject, Wheeler v. Chubbuck, 16 Ill. 361.

NOTE.—An act chartering the town of Belvidere (Pr. L. 1857, 252) and an amendment thereto (Pr. L 1859, 585) appear under the head Kane County, and an act chartering Belvidere College (Pr. L. 1837, 200), under Winnebago County. They should all have appeared under BOONE COUNTY, Belvidere. An act for the organization and government of the Militia, approved 2 Mar. 1833 and taking effect 2 July 1833, was not published with the Laws of 1833 but in a volume by itself. This was not observed until Part I had gone to press. The act is found Gale's Stat. 469. An act amending Union College charter, L. 1839 (22 Feb.) 50, should have appeared Chap. 25, Div. 2.
